Ada's Comic Diary · Blog · Post #2 · September

Hello, readers! It's Ada again. I'm in class 5-A at Begonvil Lower Secondary School in Antalya, my home city. Our school has a big sports field, a library, a science lab and an art room. The art room is my favourite place, of course!

Every morning, our headmaster, Mr Yücel, says hello to us at the school gate. Ms Güler, the assistant to the headmaster, knows the name of every pupil. Wow! Our coach, Mr Tekin, is very funny. On the sports field, he always shouts, "Run, run, run!" But in the corridors, we mustn't run. That's a rule!

This week is club week. There are colourful posters on the noticeboard, and every club has a table in the schoolyard. My friend Ozan is interested in robots, so he joins the technology club. Mira is from Vienna, Austria, but she lives in Antalya now. She loves stories, so she wants to join the drama club. "It's good for my Turkish!" she says.

And me? I love football, and I love drawing comics. The sports club or the art club? I can't decide! So I ask Ms Arslan, our English teacher. She smiles and says, "There isn't a comic club at our school. Why don't you start one?" Hmm… a comic club? What a great idea!

What's your favourite school club? Write a comment! But remember our blog rules: don't be rude, and don't share your password.

Rules Around the World

Linked to: Student's Book p. 38 – Time to Learn More: interesting rules in different countries

BEFORE YOU READ Do you know an interesting rule in another country?

> World Corner · a magazine from the school library · Page 14

Every country has its own rules and laws. People obey them, and visitors must respect them too. Some of these rules are really surprising! Here are some of them. Can you guess the reasons?

In many schools in Japan, pupils clean their classrooms and corridors every day. They also wear special indoor shoes at school. You can't wear your outdoor shoes in the classroom!

In France, pupils mustn't use their mobile phones at primary school or lower secondary school. In the breaks, they talk and play with their friends.

Many people chew gum, but in Singapore, you can't buy chewing gum in supermarkets. This rule helps keep the streets and trains clean.

In Venice, Italy, you mustn't feed the pigeons in St Mark's Square. In Rome, you can't swim in the historical fountains. But you can throw a coin into the famous Trevi Fountain!

In Greece, you can't wear high heels at some ancient sites, for example at the Acropolis in Athens. Thin heels can damage the old stones, so this rule protects them.

Ada's note: I'm reading this page at home with my big sister, Nil. My favourite rule is the Japanese one, because in our class, we clean the board after every lesson, too! Nil laughs and says, "Fıstık, you mustn't chase the pigeons in Venice!" But Fıstık doesn't care. He's sleeping on the sofa.

NEW CLUB! Our school has a new school club, and it's my idea! First, I think about the activities of a comic club. Then I make a big poster with drawings of them. I present my poster to our headmaster, Mr Yücel. Ozan and Mira come with me for good luck. Mr Yücel looks at the poster for a long time. Then he smiles and says, "Yes! Let's get started!"

The Comic Club meets every Wednesday afternoon in the art room. We have eleven members now. Ozan draws robot heroes. Mira writes funny stories in English and Turkish, and I draw them. Our club rules are easy: Share your pencils. Don't copy other people's comics. And you mustn't laugh at a friend's drawing, but you can laugh at a funny joke!

SPECIAL DAY! On 29 October 1923, Türkiye became a republic, and Atatürk was its first President. Every year, we celebrate this national day with a ceremony in the conference hall. This year, we sing the National Anthem together, and some pupils read poems. Then the folk dance club performs the horon, a dance from Trabzon. Grandpa Rıza watches the show. He was born in Trabzon, so he claps and claps!

NEXT WEEK: The Comic Club's first comic in Begonvil News! It's about a small brown dog, a cheese sandwich and a big mystery at school. Can you guess the dog's name? Do you like drawing? Then join us on Wednesdays!
