BEFORE YOU READ Do you like eating out? What do you usually order in a restaurant?

Ada's Comic Diary · Friday evening in Adana

Friday evening in Adana. Dad is a guest chef at the big food festival this weekend, so we are all here – but Fıstık is with our neighbour in Antalya. Tonight Mum and Dad are busy, so Grandpa takes Nil and me out for dinner.

Waiter Good evening! Have you got a reservation?

Grandpa Yes, we have. A table for three. The name is Aksoy.

Waiter Ah, the Aksoy family! Welcome! This way, please. Here's the menu.

Ada Can I order first? I'm hungry!

Grandpa Of course you can.

Ada Have you got any pizza?

Waiter Sorry, we haven't got any pizza. This is Adana! I recommend our Adana kebab: minced meat on a long, wide skewer. Our cook grills it.

Ada A skewer? What's that?

Waiter It's a long metal stick. Don't worry – you don't eat the stick!

Ada Ha ha! Can I have an Adana kebab, please?

Nil I'd like something light. Have you got any salad?

Waiter Yes, we've got a shepherd's salad with tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers and onions.

Grandpa I'd like a kebab too, and a glass of şalgam, please.

Ada Şalgam? What's that?

Grandpa It's a purple drink. People here love it with kebab. Taste it!

Ada Hmm… It's very sour! Can I have an ayran, please?

Later…

Ada This kebab is delicious!

Waiter Would you like a dessert?

Grandpa No, thank you. We're full. Can I have the bill, please? Can I pay in cash?

Waiter Sorry, you can't. Chef Kemal is my old friend, and this dinner is a present from him!

Ada That's Dad! He's got lots of friends – and lots of bad jokes!

Little Chefs' Lentil Balls

Linked to: Student's Book pp. 106–107 – the "Spanish Churros" recipe and writing your favourite recipe

BEFORE YOU READ What is your favourite dish? Can you make it? What do you need?

> Little Chefs' Corner · Food festival in Adana · Saturday morning
> Recipe card by Chef Kemal Aksoy and his helper, Ada

Hello, little chefs! This weekend my dad is a guest chef at the food festival in Adana. On Saturday morning, he has a cooking class for children, and I'm his helper! Here is our recipe for lentil balls (mercimek köftesi). They are healthy and delicious – and you make them with your hands!

Ingredients (for about 30 balls): a glass of red lentils · three glasses of water · a glass of fine bulgur · an onion · three tablespoons of olive oil · a tablespoon of tomato paste · a teaspoon of salt · a teaspoon of cumin · four spring onions · some parsley · a lemon · some lettuce

1. First, wash your hands.

2. A grown-up boils the lentils in the water for fifteen minutes and stirs them. Then he or she turns off the cooker and adds the bulgur. Wait for twenty minutes.

3. Next, a grown-up cuts the onion and cooks it in the oil with the tomato paste. (Grown-up job – the pan is hot!)

4. Wash and dry the parsley and the spring onions. A grown-up cuts them into small pieces.

5. When everything is cool, put it all in a big bowl. Add the salt, the cumin and the juice of half a lemon. Mix it with your hands.

6. Taste the mixture. Need more lemon? Add some!

7. Finally, take a little of the mixture, squeeze it in your hand and make a small ball. Put the balls on the lettuce leaves.

Dad's bad joke of the day: "Ada, these are lentil balls, not footballs. Please don't kick them!"

Enjoy your meal! Chef Kemal and Ada

BEFORE YOU READ Is there a food festival in your city? What food do you want to taste there?

Ada's Comic Diary · Blog · Greetings from Adana!

Hi, everyone! Greetings from Adana! This weekend Dad is a guest chef at the big food festival here, so all the Aksoys are in the city. Well, not Fıstık. He's with our neighbour in Antalya, with a big bag of dog biscuits.

The festival is amazing! There are lots of food stalls, and everything smells wonderful. You can taste dishes from all over Türkiye and from other countries, too. Grandpa is trying all the sweet desserts, and Mum is taking photos of food – not animals this time! Nil is buttering Dad up: "You're a fantastic chef, Dad! Can I go to the concert tonight?" (He says yes.)

At three o'clock, it's Dad's show on the big stage. He's making Antalya piyaz, a bean salad with a special tahini sauce. It's a famous dish from our city. Then Dad asks, "Can I have a helper, please?" My hand goes up – and Dad chooses me!

My job is easy: stir the sauce slowly. But I'm very excited, so I stir really fast. Oops! There's sauce on the table, on Dad's white jacket and on my nose! Everybody laughs, Grandpa claps, and Mum takes a photo, of course.

Then the presenter asks, "Chef, what's your secret ingredient?" Dad smiles. "Sorry, I can't tell you!" Later, at the hotel, I ask him again. He laughs. "My secret ingredient is my helper. But next time, she needs to stir more slowly!"

Chopsticks, Tortillas and Tea

Linked to: Student's Book p. 108 – CLIL & Culture: eating habits around the world

BEFORE YOU READ What do you usually eat for breakfast? Do children in other countries eat the same things?

English project · Ada Aksoy · 5-A · for Ms Arslan
Eating habits around the world

On Sunday, there is a World Kitchen tent at the food festival in Adana. Grandpa and I visit it, and I take notes for my English project. In many countries, people have three main meals a day, but their eating habits are different. (Later, Mum and I check my facts in books.)

Japan: Many people eat with chopsticks. A traditional breakfast can be rice, miso soup and fish. The rice is in a small bowl.

Mexico: Tortillas are thin, flat breads made from corn or flour. People put beans, meat, cheese or vegetables in them.

Spain: Lunch is often the biggest meal of the day, and dinner is late – often at nine or ten o'clock in the evening! Some people have churros with hot chocolate for breakfast.

India: In many parts of India, people eat with their right hand. Rice and dal, a dish of lentils with spices, are very popular.

Ethiopia: Families often eat together from one big plate. They use injera, a big, soft, flat bread, to pick up the food.

Türkiye: Breakfast is a big meal, especially at weekends. People eat cheese, olives, tomatoes, cucumbers, eggs, bread, butter and jam – and they drink tea, of course!

At the Japanese stall, Grandpa tries to eat rice with chopsticks, but he is very slow. After five minutes, he asks, “Can I have a spoon, please?” The cook laughs and gives him one. Different countries have got different habits, but everywhere people love sharing delicious food with family and friends.
